Come explore the story of Nearest Green. He was an enslaved man who became the first known African-American master distiller. He also taught a fellow named Jack Daniel how to make whiskey. Born around 1820, he was leased to a distiller named Dan Call where he perfected his craft, eventually teaching the process to Call's young apprentice, Jack Daniel. Green's mastery was instrumental to the creation of what would become Jack Daniel's Tennessee Whiskey, and his legacy has since been revived through the Uncle Nearest whiskey brand.
